A Place for All

The Australian War Memorial New entrance is a landmark project that reimagines the visitor experience at one of Australia's significant cultural institutions. This transformative addition respects the Memorial's legacy while creating a space that is inclusive, reflective, and architecturally significant, preserving its core values of remembrance and education.

In alignment with Walter Burley Griffin's master plan, the Memorial's placement along a radial axis linking Capitol Hill to Mount Ainslie emphasizes its national significance. Entrance reinforces visual and spatial coherence through three elements: The Focal Nexus, aligning with the Hall of Memory, Tomb of Unknown Soldier and The Pool of Reflection; The Guiding Wall, creating an intuitive flow through radial geometry; and the Bounding Wall, framing the Parade Ground with dignified presence.
